Look out for the following signs in the Reserve

The animals in the Reserve are shy and sensitive to noise. In order to enjoy their presence, visitors are reminded to remain as quiet as possible during the walk. Let the animals go about their daily lives in peace.

Take nothing and destroy nothing in the Reserve. Let the plants and animals have a chance to live. All the plants and animals are connected. The destruction of one would affect another and ultimately the whole web of life will be destroyed.

Bring out what you brought in. Keeping the Reserve clean and pollution free is essential for the survival of the plants and animals.

The animals have a better chance of survival in the wild. Do not take them out of their natural habitat. Give everyone a chance to enjoy their presence. If there is no control over the collection of animals in the Reserve, they will one day go extinct.
